

SILHOUETTE NEWSLETTER

SKETCHBOOK

stories

MARCH EDITION

PALAK AGRAWAL

I am an artist who works across different mediums to express my ideas, constantly exploring and experimenting with new styles and techniques. I enjoy turning simple concepts into visually engaging pieces, adapting my approach based on what each reaction demands.

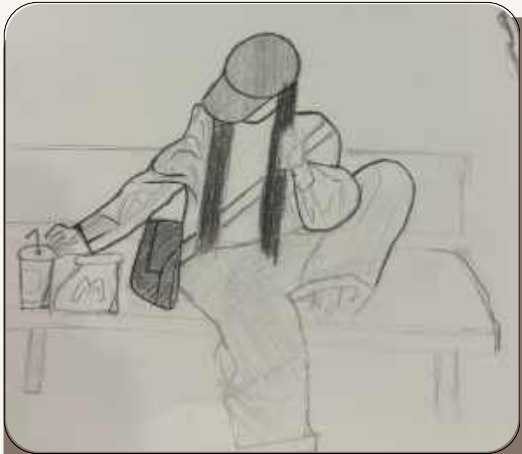

Laced in Stillness

A quiet moment of solitude as a figure ties her shoe, lost in thought.

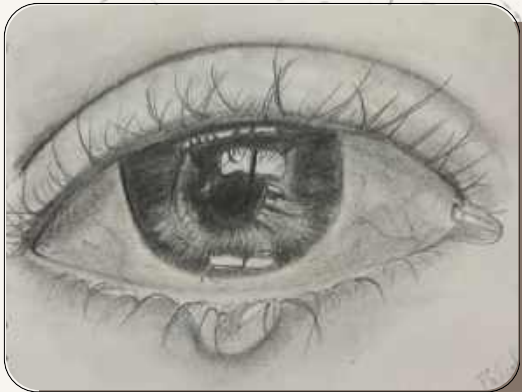

SILHOUETTE NEWSLETTER

Ink & Obsession

The Watcher

Tanjiro's Gaze

Bare Confidence

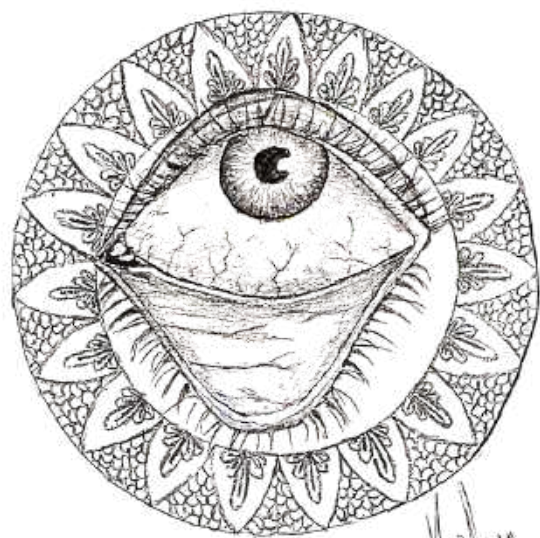

Corseted Grace

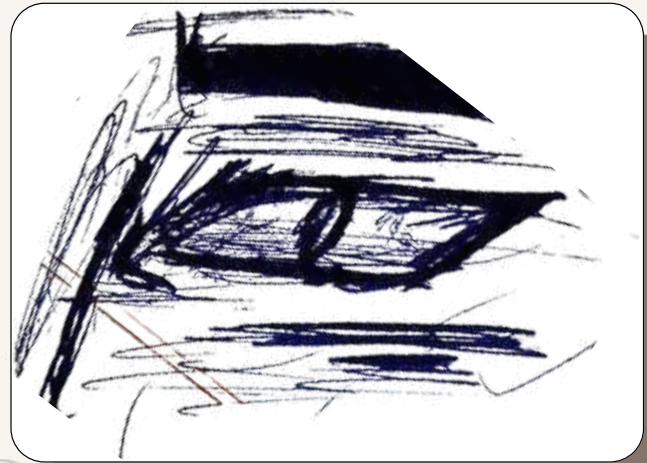

HRIDAY THAKUR

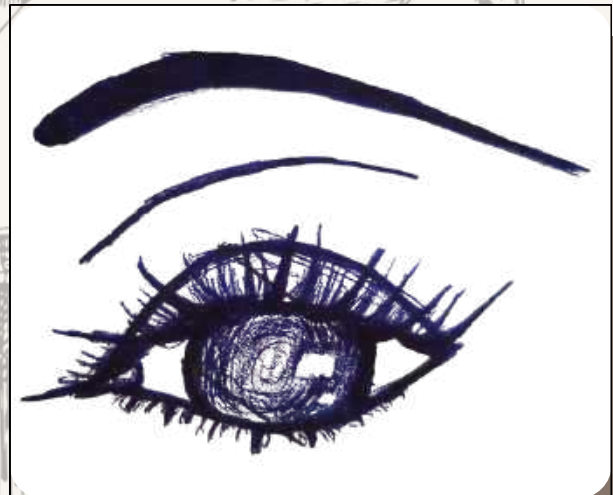

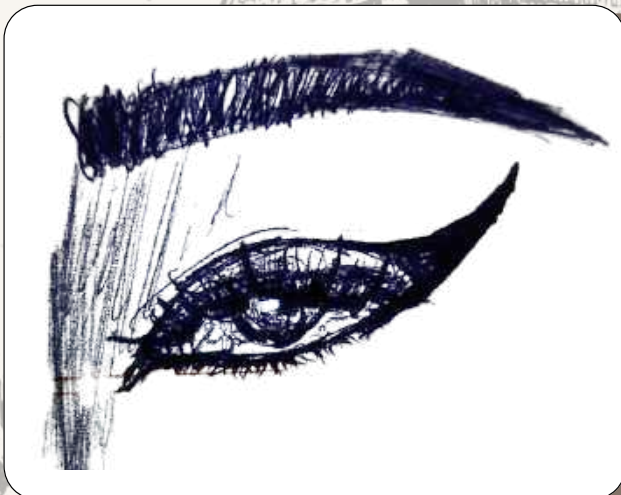

📷 @hridaythecreator

An emerging artist exploring emotion, identity, and expression through bold line work and intuitive sketching. Focused on turning simple forms into raw, expressive visuals.

A mix of detailed and raw sketches exploring emotion and perception through eyes and faces. The work shifts between controlled graphite shading and chaotic pen strokes, capturing both structure and spontaneity.

GAURANVI MEHRA

 @boradraws_

I am a self taught artist, and I love trying different mediums including charcoal, colored pencils, acrylic and digital. I love working on portraits and cute characters. Check out my work on my Instagram @boradraws_ ! :)

Her Other Self

"Her Other Self" captures a visceral, psychological split where a single identity fragments into two distinct states of being. The foreground figure, with her heavy-eyed and weary stare, represents the External Self—the version of the soul that must remain present and bear the weight of the world's gaze. In contrast, the background figure drifts away, representing the Internal Self or a subconscious memory that is retreating into a silent, contemplative space. Through the raw, monochromatic red and the overlapping composition, the piece illustrates the tension between staying grounded in reality and getting lost in the echoes of one's own mind.

17 Echoes

A raw, crimson-inked dialogue with a legacy of vulnerability. Inspired by the emotional depth of the album 17, these layered portraits merge visceral details—like the "Numb" and "Alone" tattoos—with haunting lyrics and chaotic red scribbles. The contrast between the internal noise of the sketches and the subject's steady, melancholic gaze captures a distorted beauty, transforming the dot-grid page into a visual echo of a soul seeking peace through its own fragmentation.

This piece explores the disconnect between identity and observation. By scattering three distinct portraits across a stark, ink-black void, the artwork suggests a single soul viewed through a shattered lens. The subjects' eyes—rendered in delicate, monochromatic red—refuse to settle on a single point, instead looking past the viewer into separate, unseen worlds. The visible dot-grid texture beneath the ink emphasizes this sense of fragmentation, acting as a mathematical cage for the fluid, emotive sketches. It is a study of being seen without ever truly being known.

Fragmented Glazes

Little Ember

A glowing, monochromatic study of childhood rendered in soft crimson strokes. "Little Ember" captures a moment of unshielded curiosity, with wide, liquid eyes pulling the viewer into a low-angle perspective. The red ink feels organic and pulsing, mirroring the warmth and untamed potential of the subject against the steady texture of the dot-grid paper.

FICTION

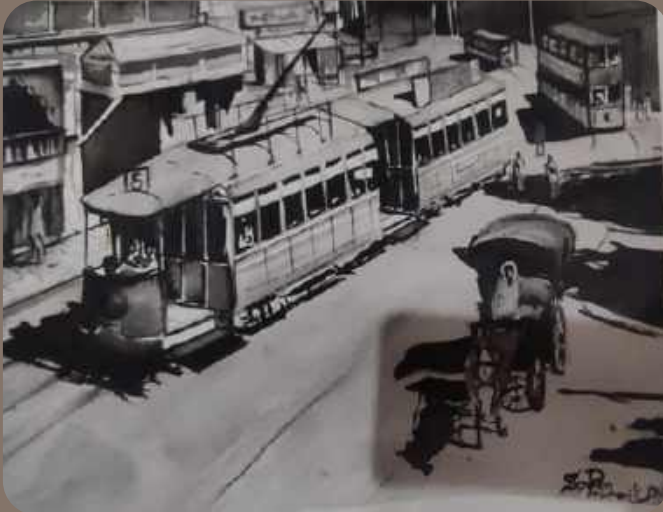

FORMS

FACES

LAVANYA GIRDHAR

I'm an artist who enjoys learning and trying new things through my work. I like to understand what I'm creating and think about the ideas behind it, not just how it looks. For me, art is a way to express my thoughts and feelings in a simple and honest way. With every piece, I'm growing and slowly finding what feels right for me.

Tracks of Time

A beautifully detailed pencil sketch of blooming roses arranged in a natural cluster. The artist has used strong contrast and soft shading to give depth to each petal, making the flowers appear almost three-dimensional. The leaves and stems are carefully textured, balancing light and shadow to create a realistic botanical study. The composition feels elegant and slightly dramatic due to the bold dark tones.

Whispers of Bloom

This artwork captures a vintage urban street scene featuring a tram moving along curved tracks. The perspective is well-handled, drawing the viewer's eye into the depth of the street. Elements like buildings, a rickshaw, and small human figures add life and narrative. The use of light and shadow is striking, with high contrast areas suggesting sunlight and movement, giving the sketch a cinematic, old-city vibe.

SOMEN PRAMANIK

As an artist, I love exploring new forms, though I'll admit, I sometimes leave a few creative experiments unfinished. But that's the beauty of art: it's about trying, exploring, and learning through the process. I use drawing as a way to understand people, emotions, and the spaces in between. My work moves between simple line drawings and more detailed ink and graphite pieces, depending on what the idea asks for. I am interested in the human form, thoughts, and little symbols that reveal much about a bigger narrative. Rather than clarify, I prefer to leave my drawings somewhat open to interpretation, giving the viewer a chance to take a second look.

NISHTHA PRIYA

POLLINATING VISION

(Beauty is in the eye of the bee-holder.). A human eye holds a bee within its gaze—quiet, close, and undefined. It leaves a question behind: are we simply observing nature, or shaping what survives within it?

OLD MEMORIES

1. A bittersweet story of childhood turning into long-term teasing, told through simple and expressive panels. It quietly shows how time passes, but certain relationships stay strangely the same.

FACES OF SOLE

Multiple face sketches exploring angles, structure, and expression in a Vagabond-inspired style. Shows strong understanding of anatomy, lighting, and subtle emotional variation.

USNIK MONDAL

INITIAL D

A dynamic recreation inspired by Initial D, capturing the thrill of night racing and drifting. The rough, energetic lines emphasize speed, motion, and the tension of street racing.

CHAHAT GAUTAM

I am an artist who finds beauty in quiet moments and unspoken emotions. My work often explores the connection between human expression and nature, using soft lines and delicate details to convey depth and feeling. I'm drawn to creating pieces that reflect introspection, vulnerability, and the hidden sides of identity. Through my art, I aim to capture what is often felt but rarely said.

HALF SEEN

A half-portrait capturing quiet emotion through a single, expressive gaze. The visible eye reflects depth and unspoken thoughts, while the hidden half suggests mystery and untold stories. Soft shading and flowing hair blend with delicate flowers, symbolizing a subtle connection between identity and nature, and the beauty that exists in both what is shown and what remains unseen.

LOOMING WITHIN SILENCE

A delicate fusion of human emotion and nature, this piece portrays a serene feminine profile emerging from a flourishing garden of flowers. The blossoms intertwine with her thoughts, symbolizing growth, healing, and quiet resilience. The closed eye suggests introspection—an inner world where beauty thrives even in silence. Fine linework and gentle shading create a sense of softness, while the organic flow of petals and leaves reflects the harmony between mind and nature. It speaks of becoming—of blooming not loudly, but deeply, from within.

AWANI KUSHWAHA

REFLECT ON YOUR DEMONS
Do You Know Your Demons?

SHREYA VERMA

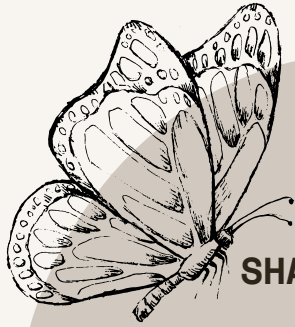

Artios_4637

PORTRAIT OF SMAR KOKILA

A hand-drawn portrait of a legendary singer, surrounded by musical notes that symbolize her timeless contribution to music. The artwork highlights grace, expression, and the power of melody.

ANIKA KHANDELWAL

SHATTERED SILENCE

A girl hiding her emotions behind silence, even though she's clearly hurting inside. Inspired by those moments when you feel a lot but choose not to say anything—keeping everything inside.

LOST IN TIME

A girl walking into a broken clock, unsure of where life is taking her. Inspired by the feeling of being lost in life and overthinking about time, future, and decisions.

SAUMYA SHARMA

THE LAST DISPATCH

A girl hiding her emotions behind silence, even though she's clearly hurting inside. Inspired by those moments when you feel a lot but choose not to say anything — keeping everything inside.

RIDHIMA GUPTA

THE UNWRITTEN OATH

he was strength,
she was silence

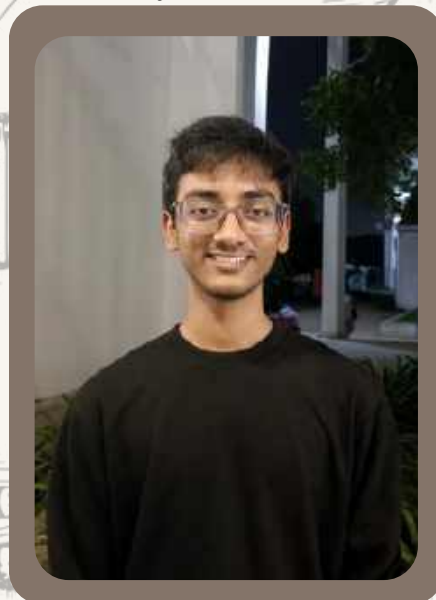

Vedika

DASTAK

Just a heard a song and drew what it made me feel like.

Rishabh Raj

FROM FIRE TO FROST

WINDOWS OF A RESTLESS MIND

A peek inside a mind that never sits still. Each pair of eyes tells a different mood: dreamy, messy, curious, or quietly watching. Little creatures, stars, and swirls drift around like thoughts, blurring the line between reality and imagination.

Sneha

Edited by:
PALAK AGRAWAL
KANAK MEHRA

@SILHOUETTE_BU

SILHOUETTE NEWSLETTER

SKETCHBOOK

stories

MARCH EDITION