KANAK MEHRA

I'm Kanak, an emerging artist with formal training who enjoys exploring different styles and ideas through my work. I'm interested in both traditional and modern art, and I like understanding the background and theory behind what I create. My approach is simple- learning, experimenting, and slowly building a style that feels personal to me. I enjoy trying new techniques while also drawing from what I've studied, and with each piece, I continue to grow and express my thoughts in a more refined way.

LOTUS FEET

This draws inspiration from the divine bond of Radha and Krishna, symbolising devotion, surrender, and sacred love. In Indian spiritual tradition, the phrase "lotus feet" is used to describe the auspicious and revered feet of the divine, representing purity, grace, and a path towards devotion. Radha's feet in Krishna's hands, reflects the timeless connection between the soul and the divine.

GANPATI BAPPA

A reflection on the quiet strength and reassurance that faith brings in moments of chaos. This artwork represents Ganpati Bappa not merely as a deity of celebration, but as a symbol of calm, wisdom, and inner balance. Through an expressive contemporary style, it explores the idea of finding peace within oneself while staying connected to devotion and spirituality.

SILENCED EVIDENCE

This piece explores the unsettling reality of violence that is often hidden beneath silence and societal neglect. The blurred figure, marked by stains, imprints, and fragments of identity, reflects stories that remain unheard even after leaving traces behind. The impressions across the canvas symbolise memories, trauma, and voices that persist despite attempts to erase them. Through its raw and haunting composition, the artwork questions how often suffering is ignored until it becomes nothing more than a "crime scene."

WINGS BEFORE FLIGHT

This artwork reflects the rare balance between innocence and strength. By portraying an eagle in its earliest stage of life, the artwork softens the fierce image often associated with the bird, revealing a quieter and more vulnerable presence beneath its natural intensity. The piece explores how qualities like courage, vision, and resilience can exist even within innocence, suggesting that strength does not always arrive with age or experience sometimes, it is simply born within.

HRIDAY THAKUR

A passionate and creative individual, I enjoy expressing my ideas through art and hands-on projects. With a deep appreciation for tradition and culture, I like to blend creativity with meaningful practices, turning simple moments into something special. Whether it's crafting, designing, or exploring new artistic techniques, I find joy in creating things that reflect both emotion and imagination.

BALLADS 1 BY "JOJI BLEACH" PAINTED ON A TSHIRT

A handmade bleach-painted T-shirt inspired by the cover art of BALLADS 1, created as my very first attempt at bleach painting. Designed on a muted pink oversized tee, the artwork was carefully painted by hand using layered bleach techniques to recreate the album's raw and emotional aesthetic in a softer, more minimal style. The contrast between the pastel fabric and the faded bleach detailing gives the piece a subtle yet expressive look, turning a simple T-shirt into a personal art piece that reflects experimentation, creativity, and my appreciation for Joji's music and visual style.

HEADPHONES WALE BAPPA

Every year, welcoming Bappa is a special moment for me, and I make it even more meaningful by creating my own idol by hand. The process allows me to combine devotion with creativity, turning the celebration into something personal and memorable. I enjoy experimenting with different styles each year while keeping the essence of Bappa intact, making every creation unique. As someone who is passionate about art and hands-on creativity, I love expressing ideas through making things that hold both emotional and cultural value.

SOMEN PRAMANIK

I have always been drawn to things the world is slowly forgetting — the crumbling walls of old buildings, the quiet corners of a forest, the stories etched into worn wood and weathered stone. My art is not just observation, it is remembrance. I paint what deserves to be seen one last time, and perhaps, forever.

WHISPERS OF THE THRESHOLD

A door that has witnessed a thousand goodbyes and a thousand returns — standing still, holding the breath of every soul that once passed through it.

THE RIVER REMEMBERS

Gentle waters mirror the quiet life of those who chose simplicity over noise. Here, the river carries not just reflections — but entire lifetimes.

WHERE THE NIGHT LINGERS

A street where the lamplight melts into the mist, and time forgets to move. Some evenings are too beautiful to ever fully end.

SILENT PEAKS

This painting captures the quiet beauty of mountains standing tall behind a dense forest. The mist around the trees and the snowy peaks give it a calm, early-morning feel, like nature has completely paused for a moment.

HIDDEN FALLS

A scenic view of rocky cliffs surrounding a bright green lake with a small waterfall flowing gently in the background. The painting feels wild yet peaceful, like a secret place deep inside the mountains waiting to be discovered.

VEERESH RAJPUT

THE RED STRING

Inspired by the legend of the Red String Theory, this artwork explores the idea that certain souls are eternally connected by an invisible thread of fate. The reaching hands reflect yearning, intimacy, and the quiet hope of finding someone destined for you, while the flowing line weaving through the composition symbolizes the unseen bond that survives distance, time, and circumstance. The contrasting cosmic patterns and skeletal forms represent the chaos, loneliness, and emotional depth experienced before two paths finally intertwine. Through fragmented imagery and monochrome textures, the piece captures how love and connection can feel both delicate and inevitable at the same time.

SHREYA VERMA

I love creating art that feels calm, real, and expressive. My work is inspired by everyday moments and emotions, which I try to translate into simple yet meaningful visuals. I enjoy experimenting with different forms of art, styles, and techniques, as it allows me to explore creativity in new ways and keep my work fresh and evolving. For me, art is not just about how it looks, but about the feeling it leaves behind.
